Craig Kasper is Executive Vice President of Hull & Associates, LLC, an engineering and environmental consulting firm helping businesses and governments solve complex challenges related to real estate, energy, water, industrials, technology and infrastructure. Since joining Hull in 1989 and leading its success as CEO until 2020, the firm continued to grow and gain national recognition. As Executive Vice President and part of a new leadership team, Kasper is focused on companywide market strategies, business development, and an aggressive acquisition strategy to build a national best-in-practice company.

As one of the key authors of Ohio's first brownfield regulatory program, Kasper is a recognized expert for his creative redevelopment strategies and leadership in this field. Kasper specializes in all aspects of the firm's strategic work related to high-profile, major urban redevelopment projects throughout the country. In addition, he has provided leadership on the development of many key energy assets and is currently leading strategies for the brown to green power generation transformation occurring nationally.

He has regularly lectured at the Harvard University Graduate School of Design and Business School on redevelopment and sustainability issues and has testified on important legislation in the Ohio General Assembly and U.S. House of Representatives. Kasper, a Registered Professional Engineer, has a Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from Ohio Northern University. He lives in Ohio with his wife and spends times with many outdoor activities and enjoying his 3 adult children.
